

A Quick Note To All Atheists

By
Reverend Fuzzy

As of late, there have been far too many Atheists insinuating themselves upon those of us that believe in a supreme being. Many of you are still trying to push the “flying spaghetti monster” scenario on those who have not yet decided for themselves. Even more of you are doing your best to keep prayer and other forms of worship out of our schools (even though most in-school violence started when prayer was banned). And worse yet, I was appalled to witness one of you standing at the back of a ceremony, giving “the raspberry” to the officiant. Well, it’s one thing when you do these things at your Atheism meetings, but when you do these things in public; you’re taking innocent bystanders with you on your trip to the abyss. Yes, I know you’re sitting there, snickering, and trying to think up a good argument for the age-old “what if you’re wrong” debate.

Well, here’s how that debate always has, and always will go down...

When we die...

1. If I’m wrong, I spent my life being happy, promoting peace, helping the less fortunate and loving every minute of a lifestyle I can be proud of.

...but if YOU’RE wrong...

2. You spend eternity in the lake of fire.

I (and all the other believers) win. There’s still time to join our team.
