

Were You Aware?

Were you aware that we're all essentially operating on a master schedule? It's true. You see, God has known you since before you were born, and sometime during that time before you were born, God created a master plan, and included in that plan was the methods by which each and every moment of your life is to be carried out. However, it doesn't end there. In that same master plan, it was also planned how each moment of your life would interface with the life of every OTHER person in the known universe (and possibly other universes). So, it's this master plan of your life AND the lives of everyone else that actually define the task (or tasks) that you were created to complete in your lifetime.

What exactly those tasks are, we lowly mortals can only venture a guess. It may be something as big as presenting a plan for world peace, or it could be as simple as saying "Good Morning", to someone who really needed to hear it, to keep them from taking their own life. But no matter what our life tasks are, we don't "go home" until those tasks are complete. This scenario can be backed up by the numerous accounts of people who have had a near death experience, only to be sent back after being told that they still have more to do, or it's not yet their time.

Yes, I'm sure that by now, many of you are sitting there saying that I'm "full of it", or that I "just don't understand", but doesn't the fact that I'm writing this article indicate that to some extent that I actually DO understand? Or at the very least, I have an inkling of what's going on? You could even say that I'm oversimplifying the situation... but what if all the great philosophers throughout history were making this, and similar theories unnecessarily complicated.

Have YOU completed your life task(s) yet? Only God knows for sure. Disagree? Let's talk.
